Where Time Matters...

RESIDENTIAL & DEMENTIA CARE

Griffin House

A small home with a big heart

A private, family-run home for twenty-six people, where care is personal, food is home-cooked and there is time for the things that matter.

A home is a feeling, not a grand building.

What matters most is knowing that someone listens, that your wishes matter and that you are cared for with warmth, dignity and love.

Griffin House is a small, independent home for twenty-six people. Our building has nearly half a century behind it. We keep it cared for and make it beautiful where we can, but it is the people and the care that make it home.

Quiet places to sit. Familiar things to enjoy. Time for an unhurried conversation.

The person leads. We follow.

We take time to understand each person's story, listen to their wishes and respect the routines and choices that make life their own.

Residential care

Round-the-clock personal care in a warm, homely setting, supporting independence while being there when needed.

Dementia care

Patient, kind support that starts with knowing the person, their routines and the little things that matter to them.

A room that feels like yours

Bedrooms and colours are chosen around the person moving in, not our preferences.

Meaningful moments.
Beautiful connections.

Creative engagement is meaningful, one-to-one connection. It may be music, painting, flower arranging, baking, memory work or gentle sensory moments, shaped around the individual.

These quiet, beautiful interactions can bring calm, joy and a sense of self, especially for a person living with dementia.

Visiting entertainment brings music, laughter and opportunities to share a little joy together.

Home-cooked.
Every single day.

Good food is at the heart of Griffin House. Fresh, home-cooked meals are prepared in our kitchen each day, with menus shaped by what our residents love to eat.

Choice at mealtimes.

A place to enjoy good food and good company.

Familiar comforts.
Thoughtful support.

Visiting professionals come to Griffin House, bringing everyday services into the home.
